NOTE: This preliminary programme may be subject to amendment to better meet participants' needs and in response to unforeseen or changing circumstances that are out of the reasonable control of the receiving organisation.

Objectives: to help participants to...

1. develop skills in ICT and make use of Web 2.0 tools and applications.
2. innovate & enhance the quality of their teaching so that they can support their students' acquisition of key competences.
3. participate in field projects to places of historical and cultural significance as a context base for creation of teaching resources.
4. exchange insights and ideas with teachers from schools in a number of European countries and discuss about dissemination strategies.

Methodology: Participants will enjoy hands-on workshops, interactive sessions, collaborative group work and reflective journaling. This methodology should enable them to use ICT in class and to exploit and create ICT resources for teaching and Learning which might help to redefine pre-conceptions about digital competence and critical literacy in class and its implications for students' learning. Field projects should provide a real life context for creation of teaching materials.
